This option will allow you to ignore users that contains links in their latest tweet if you are following from a list of other followers. Frequently Asked Questions

What is your suggested follow and unfollow count per day?

First of all, after creating a new account, I don't use it for following on the same day. Im just editing the profile, adding pictures, post some tweets then start following after 2 or 3 days.

For newly created accounts, I only follow 200-400 per day until I reach 700 followers.

If you want to follow on the 1st day, just follow around 50-150.

After 700 followers, make it 300-500 a day until you reach 1000

Then 400-600 until I reach 2000.

When I have 2000 followers, I do follow 900 - 1000 a day.

Note: Twitter might show a notification about your follow limit even before reaching those numbers because of many other conditions. Like you cannot follow more than 2000 if you have less than 2000 followers. After reaching 2000 (not exactly 2000, I think its 1820) followers you can then have a following limit 10% more than your number of followers. Until then, you need to unfollow so you can follow more.

Unfollowing

I only unfollow users who don't follow me back after 2 days and I don't protect my mutual followers most of the time so I can follow more people per day.

Are you using proxies?

Personally I don't believe twitter is checking your IP when you are using your account, I have 20+ real niche specific accounts and hundred throw away accounts and only 8 of them have proxies. They are still fine now. I have accounts suspended sometimes but very very rare.

One thing Im sure of is that, when you create multiple accounts at the same day using the same IP (without proxies) they will surely get banned after few minutes.

If you create multiple accounts on same day, better use proxies. Clear your cookies and flash cookies.

Proxies are not required but if you want to use them, don't use free public proxies because they are normally associated with spam activities, they are slow and very unstable.

I recommend proxies from http://proxybonanza.com (im not an affiliate or connected to them).

TweetAttacks shows that its following\unfollowing but I cannot see any changes in my following count

Check your Internet explorer settings and make sure that the following is present

1. Javascript should be enabled
2. ActiveX should be allowed
3. Security level should be at least medium

If problem still exists, try clearing your cookies and set Internet explorer to its default settings.
